Active Healthy Ageing

Healthy Ageing Paper

The Inner East PCP is pleased to announce that we have engaged the National Ageing Research Institute (NARI) to develop a paper on Healthy Ageing. The paper is intended to inform interested parties in promoting healthy ageing in the Eastern Region at an individual, organisational, community or systems level. This could include decision makers, leaders, community members, practitioners, business owners, students and researchers.

The paper will be made widely available via “The Well”. The Well is an online resource developed by Outer and Inner East Primary Care Partnerships. It provides users with a common framework for planning and acting to address a range of health and wellbeing issues.

Improvements to My Aged Care

From 3 July 2017, My Aged Care is making changes to better support clients, including clients with diverse needs and improve access to information for health professionals.

Practitioners' Network Information Update August 2017

These improvements will support clients through their My Aged Care journey, ensuring they are able to receive the assessments and aged care services they need. The changes will also improve health professionals' access to information to support them to provide continuity of care for their patients. Key changes:

- a clearer approach to who can speak on a client's behalf and in which circumstances
- a new form to appoint a representative
- more flexibility for clients on who they can choose to appoint as their regular representative
- improved access to information for Health Professionals to enable them to continue to work with My Aged Care assessors.
- These changes are a result of consultation with the sector on issues that were presenting barriers to good client outcomes.

More information is also available for:

These changes are also now reflected on the My Aged Care website.

Seeking your views - Future care at home reform

A public discussion paper on future care at home reform is now available on the Consultation Hub. We are seeking your views on how future reform can best support older Australians to remain living at home and in their communities. We would also welcome your early views and feedback on the February 2017 changes to home care to give consumers more choice in selecting a provider and introduce a nationally consistent process for assigning packages to consumers. We want to hear from: consumers, carers, service providers, assessors, peak groups, other stakeholders.

Written submissions will close on 21 August 2017. Your feedback will be used to inform government decisions on an integrated care at home program. For information and updates on future care at home reform, please visit the department's website.

Innovation has Older Australians Sharing in Better Caring

(Media Release from Minister for Aged Care, Ken Wyatt, 17 July 2017)

An Australian-first online marketplace linking independent care and support workers with clients highlights the promise of innovation to improve the lives of our ageing population.

Officially opening the new and expanded headquarters of Better Caring today, Aged Care Minister Ken Wyatt said the start-up company reflected the Turnbull Government's vision of individual choice and control in a consumer driven market.

The Better Caring model is founded on consumer preferences being respected and care being delivered where and when the consumer requires it. Over 20, 000 people have signed up to the Better Caring website.

Over the next five years, the Turnbull Government will invest $99.3 billion in aged care. By 2050, it is estimated a workforce of more than 800,000 people will be needed to deliver services to 3.5 million older Australians, mainly in their own homes.

Help for home care providers to guide IT investment

(Source: July 27, 2017 in Community Care Review, Education & Training)

The Aged Care Industry IT Council is facilitating a webinar for community care providers on how organisations can take advantage of the findings of the aged care technology roadmap.

The roadmap was launched in June and provides guidance to the sector on how to make technology a core part of operations and service delivery. It aligns with the Aged Care Roadmap developed by the Aged Care Sector Committee.

Practitioners' Network Information Update August 2017

The webinar held on 1 August will hear from two members of the council – Anne Livingstone, chair of the national home care group and Gavin Tomlins, chair of the CIO's Forum – to discuss the roadmap's implications for community care providers.

The roadmap outlines the need for an innovative, technology-enabled sector and is an important guide for providers seeking to embed appropriate technology in all aspects of their business.

The webinar takes place on 1 August at 10am – 11am AEST.

Premature deaths of nursing home residents: an epidemiological analysis

Joseph E Ibrahim, Lyndal Bugeja, Melissa Willoughby, Marde Bevan, Chebiwot Kipsaina, Carmel Young, Tony Pham and David L Ranson
Med J Aust 2017; 206 (10): 442-447. || doi: 10.5694/mja16.00873

Objectives: To conduct a descriptive epidemiological analysis of external cause deaths (premature, usually injury-related, and potentially preventable) of nursing home residents in Australia.

Design: Retrospective study of a cohort of nursing home residents, using coronial data routinely recorded by the National Coronial Information System.

Setting and participants: Residents of accredited Australian nursing homes, whose deaths were reported to coroners between 1 July 2000 and 30 June 2013, and determined to have resulted from external causes.

Main outcome measures: Causes of death, analysed by sex and age group, and by location of incidents leading to death and location of death. Rates of death were estimated on the basis of Australian Bureau of Statistics population and Australian Institute of Health and Welfare nursing home data.

Results: Of 21 672 deaths of nursing home residents, 3 289 (15.2%) resulted from external causes. The most frequent mechanisms of death were falls (2 679 cases, 81.5%), choking (261 cases, 7.9%) and suicide (146 cases, 4.4%). The incidents leading to death usually occurred in the nursing home (95.8%), but the deaths more frequently occurred outside the nursing home (67.1%). The annual number of external cause deaths in nursing homes increased during the study period (from 1.2 per 1000 admissions in 2001–02 to 5.3 per 1000 admissions in 2011–12).

Conclusion: The incidence of premature and potentially preventable deaths of nursing home residents has increased over the past decade. A national policy framework is needed to reduce the incidence of premature deaths among Australians living in nursing homes.

Practitioners' Network Information Update August 2017

Concerns over value for money top home care complaints: Commissioner

(Linda Belardi on July 6, 2017 in Community Care Review)

23 per cent of complaints to the Aged Care Complaints Commissioner now relate to home and community-based care services, up eight per cent since 2015, the latest data shows.

While the vast bulk of the 4,500 complaints received each year continue to primarily concern residential care, the share of complaints relating to home care and support was growing steadily.

The main issues relate to financial complaints, particularly concerns over value for money and administration charges; issues with poor communication; and concerns over service quality, such as not taking into account the individual needs and preferences of home care consumers, she said. The top five issues in community aged care related to:

1. Financial matters
2. Communication and consultation
3. Social and domestic assistance
4. Client assessment and service implementation
5. Communication about fees and charges.

NOTE: The department is considering introducing a phone call for inactive consumers after 35 days of being assigned a package. Currently, consumers are sent a reminder letter after 35 days if the system identifies they haven't yet taken up their package. Sector stakeholders have been feeding back to the department that more active management and support to consumers was required during the 56-period for taking up an assigned package

Alcohol & Drugs

New Intake Procedures (VHA July 2017)

Client assessment for alcohol and drug services has returned to treatment providers – from July 1 the responsibility for conducting comprehensive assessment and treatment planning for voluntary alcohol and other drug clients has moved from intake to treatment providers.

Catchment-based intake services will continue to provide oversight and monitoring, while people accessing treatment will develop a relationship with their treatment provider earlier in their recovery journey, reducing the need to regularly repeat their circumstances.

Carers

Valuing and caring for carers in the City of Monash (PHN news July 2017)

Culturally and Linguistically Diverse (CALD) unpaid carers in the City of Monash will be better supported to manage the challenges of their caring role and multiple responsibilities, which currently saves the Australian economy over $60 billion¹ a year.

Following a co-design forum held with carers and local support organisations, Eastern Melbourne PHN has commissioned the Multicultural Centre for Women's Health to deliver a CALD Carer Support Program. The program aims to identify CALD carers in the City of Monash and connect them with carer support services by providing culturally appropriate information and support, and reducing the stigma associated with identifying as a carer.

EMPHN CEO Robin Whyte said, the City of Monash has the highest population of people aged 65+ with severe and profound disability (13.2%) in EMPHN's catchment.

"Research suggests that in CALD communities, aged people and people with disability have carers who are often family members that provide a high level of unpaid care yet have proportionately lower rates of accessing carer support services compared to Anglo-Australians," she said.

The City of Monash is one of the one of the most culturally and linguistically diverse within EMPHN's catchment with 39.2% of its population born in countries where English was not their first language. The program aims to provide links to appropriate networks and support services for the high number of unpaid carers, who are often family members, particularly in the Chinese and Indian communities within the Monash area.

CALD carers based in the City of Monash who wish to learn more about the program should contact the Multicultural Centre for Women's Health www.mcwh.com.au 9418 0999.

Survey of Carers of LGBTIQ people with mental illness (Carers Victoria)

Carers are invited to participate in an online survey to find out more about their experiences of caring for LGBTIQ people diagnosed with a mental illness, or experiencing a mental health crisis.

The online survey is aimed at people who have had contact with mental health service providers in the past three years to gain a sense of recent carer experiences since the introduction of the Victorian Mental Health Act 2014.

We want to hear from you if you care for someone who:

- is lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, intersex, queer and/or questioning
- has been diagnosed with a mental illness or experienced a mental health crisis
- has used either in-patient or community mental health services in the last 3 years
- is over 18.

Findings from this research may be used in future publications and presentations. These will be available via the Carers Victoria website.

Carers Victoria Offer events

Carers Victoria offers carer workshops and educational programs to help you enhance your knowledge about how to best support your own health and wellbeing, and that of the person you are caring for.

Through our Education Service you will be able to explore the impact of caring on your emotional and physical health. You will also gain practical advice on how to navigate the health and community sector.

Death, Dying & Palliative Care

Economic Benefits of Palliative Care

New research analysis by the National Centre for Social and Economic Modelling (NATSEM) at the University of Canberra clearly shows palliative care improves the quality of life for Australians while also reducing health care costs across Australia's health system.

"Research consistently shows that people who receive palliative care compared with those receiving usual care, have less hospitalisations, shorter lengths of hospital stay, reduced use of Intensive Care Units and fewer visits to Emergency Departments. ...The provision of palliative care in hospitals decreases costs by better matching treatments to patients' and families' preferences and goals of care. This not only improves the quality of end-of-life care but also the quality of dying," Ms Callaghan from palliative Care Australia said. The cost-savings also extend to home-based palliative care, where 70% of Australians would prefer to die.

Seeking Participants for research

Is video conferencing helpful for carers of people with dementia to understand and respond better to the behaviours of the person they care for?

That's the question that Strategies for Relatives (START) On-line is hoping to answer.

Currently the program is recruiting new participants to take part in eight weekly face to face (through video conferencing) sessions of education, relaxation, and counselling.

Each participant will learn how to use the videoconferencing software before the program starts. Before and after the eight weeks of the program, participants will complete questionnaires about their wellbeing and quality of life, and the wellbeing and quality of life of the person they care for.

To participate in the study, carers need to be 18 years of age or over, caring for and living with someone with dementia and live within 100k radius of Melbourne.

To participate or to find out more about this project, please contact Ellen Gaffy at NARI (03) 8387 2296 or e.gaffy@nari.edu.au.

Online course tackles critical issues in dementia care

(Source: Community Care Review, Education & Training)

Aged care workers are being encouraged to enrol in a free online course run by the University of Tasmania on the latest in dementia care and research.

The popular Massive Open Online Course (MOOC) Understanding Dementia is run over nine weeks and explores the causes and symptoms of dementia and ways to improve the quality of life of people living with the condition.

The course was developed by the Wicking Dementia Research and Education Centre and draws together the expertise of neuroscientists, clinicians and dementia care professionals in the field.

The MOOC is divided into three course units: 'the brain', 'the diseases' and 'the person', and includes information on a wide range of topics including basic brain anatomy, dementia behaviours and palliation.

Understanding Dementia has been designed for a diverse audience including health professionals, community support staff, policymakers, social scientists and family carers. Enrolments close 18 August.

New Research on Parkinsons & Dementia

(Source: Zhang Z, Kang SS, Liu X, et al.

Asparagine endopeptidase cleaves α -synuclein and mediates pathologic activities in Parkinson's disease. Nature Structural and Molecular Biology. 2017)

A similarity between two distinct neurodegenerative diseases, Parkinson's and Alzheimer's, may lead to a potential new drug treatment for Parkinson's. On a biochemical level, the diseases develop when sticky proteins form clumps in brain cells, researchers from Emory Health Sciences said. They found that the same enzyme also spurred the process in both diseases.

The discovery, though promising, is likely not the ultimate cure for Parkinson's, as AEP, the enzyme it inhibits, is not the only enzyme that leads to toxic build-up of proteins. Still, the implication of this treatment could have many far-reaching benefits.

Funding To Strengthen Disability Advocacy

(DARU 3 July 2017)

Disability advocacy organisations have been given a financial boost to better support people with a disability to access advocacy services.

A key part of the Andrews Labor Government's state disability plan, Minister for Disability Martin Foley today announced the successful recipients through a $1.5 million Disability Advocacy Innovation Fund.

The Labor Government's support will ensure Victorians with a disability can genuinely exercise greater choice and control under the National Disability Insurance Scheme.

The grants will support organisations funded under the Victorian Disability Advocacy Program to deliver 21 initiatives to support Victorians with a disability access an advocate, when they need it.

The funding will enable organisations across Victoria access to advocates, to ensure the needs and rights of people with disability are facilitated within local communities.

A range of initiatives are supporting diverse communities across the state to build partnerships with mainstream organisations and unfunded self advocacy groups.

Report on Australia's spending on Preventive Health (HANet July 2017)

A new economic report looking at what Australia invests in preventive health has found Australia ranks poorly on the world stage and has determined that governments must spend more wisely to contain the burgeoning healthcare budget.

Treating chronic disease costs the Australian community an estimated $27 billion annually, accounting for more than a third of our national health budget.

Yet Australia currently spends just over $2 billion on preventive health each year, or around $89 per person. At just 1.34 per cent of Australian healthcare expenditure, the amount is considerably less than OECD countries Canada, New Zealand and the United Kingdom, with Australia ranked 16th out of 31 OECD countries by per capita expenditure.

(AHPA July 2017)

The Turnbull Government has established a new mental health advisory panel to support their commitment to improve services. The Primary Health Network Advisory Panel on Mental Health will work closely with the Government on its plan to deliver more frontline mental health services. Primary Health Networks (PHNs) have substantial responsibilities in mental health:

- They plan and commission primary mental health care services at the regional level;
- They plan and coordinate the clinical service needs of people with severe and complex mental illness who are managed in primary care;
- They implement evidence-based stepped care; and
- They integrate services in partnership with state and territory governments, general practitioners, non-government organisations, National Disability Insurance Scheme providers and other related services, organisations and providers.

News from the Association

In the past 12 months, the Stroke Association of Victoria has made some major changes and seen some exciting new developments in the area of stroke support in our state.

In September last year the Boroondara Community Stroke Hub opened, in partnership with the Local Council, led by the Boroondara Stroke Support Group. In the year ahead, we will see new community stroke support centre sites develop in the Bendigo Loddon Mallee region and in the West of Melbourne.

All of this progress has been made possible via seed-funding grants from philanthropic trusts, small businesses, community groups and membership of the Association – a big thank you to everyone!

Changing Places Funding Round 2017 is now open (Source: DARU news July 2017)

Funding of up to $100,000 (plus GST) will be provided to support local councils and not-for-profit organisations to construct a Changing Places facility.

The Changing Places Funding Round 2017 will fund up to 20 projects which meet the following criteria:

- can demonstrate identified need from people with disabilities, their families, friends and carers for a Changing Places facility in their locality and provide evidence of the extent of local support for a Changing Places facility.

- can clearly demonstrate social, economic and accessibility benefits for people with a disability.
- will be built according to the Changing Places design specifications as outlined in Changing Places information guide & technical standard and accredited as a Changing Place.

Changing Places facilities are larger than standard accessible toilets, and have extra features and more space to meet the needs of people with a disability and their carers. Each facility has a height adjustable, adult-sized changing bench, a tracking hoist system, space for two people and a safer and cleaner environment.
